

DESCRIPTION

The Coastal vine-growing regions of South Africa have been considered 'Outlaw' country – for people and for grape varieties – for centuries. Whereas vineyards near the city are subject to changes in fashion – they can easily be replaced within 20 years – in this neck of the woods, very old age is the norm.

TASTING NOTES

The climate is unforgiving: often arid and dry, dotted with very venerable old bush vine vineyards. The Outlaw wines have been blended to showcase the maverick character of this unique place. And so, we present this zesty yet textured Chenin Blanc, clear with green hints and packed with aromas of fig and citrus. A white wine at once beguiling, enigmatic and masterfully balanced.
